THE TRUCK PATCH

We had quite an exciting time in the "patch" last Saturday when the big country automobile got scared and ran off. Did you hear about it? It seems they were going along at a very moderate speed when all of a sudden they heard a noise like chickens in front of Mr. Goss's and backed over a ten-foot embankment. The wheel hints went over first, and the foremost Wheeler, with several friends and a big stone, fell on them all. I'll tell you, it was a sure hard fall. The driver, a magistrate, a surveyor, a doctor and his chauffeur. The doctor was the first to the rescue, he being the least injured of all. The first thing he did was to feel the pulse of the auto, and found it pulsating and beating in such a manner that he could do little. He ready hit himself out, however, for he was stopped by a passing freight train, and with aid of the crew, they lifted the mighty thing and laid it down where it could rest and cool off. The doctor then got to get the other members of the party, with the help of the off Wheeler they lifted the Stone and carried him to the home of Mother Goss, who very graciously offered to do all she could for the doctor. The doctor, however, wasn't the only one who was busy in his efforts to get the car out, the magistrate at once ordered another automobile. The poor chauffeur was the only one who was not able to do anything, but we hope he will be all right again. The doctor, after he had been to the hospital, took a joy ride. There is a little moral to this affair. Ye automobile, it's a good idea to take a doctor along; they are most as handy as a monkey wrench or a jack screw.

A Mountain Flower

BY ELDEBE.

Larne started and a strange mystified look crossed his face.

"Mock minister?" inquired he, in a bewildered tone.

"Yes, I know as well as I that the marriage between Walter Lyon and myself was a mere sham, and through your agency. But thank heaven, there was another ceremony, and I am now his lawful wife."

"I beg your pardon, but the first ceremony," was all Larne said.

"Larne, there was no mockery or sham about it. The minister was the Rev. Dr. Hale, of New York. Mrs. Lyon, you are laboring under a mistake if you think I assisted willfully in this marriage. I did my best, but I could not fail to teach him his love-mongering."

"Let us return to the ball-room," said Captain Daubney, "but I hope my little cousin will not fall in love with him."

"Please do not speak to me of love or lovers," said she. "Remember, I have been a widow only a very short time."

Captain Daubney made no reply for a few moments. He loved his cousin and had intended asking her then and there to be his wife; but Larne's words could not fail to teach him his love-mongering."

"Let us return to the ball-room," said he. "There is a waltz in progress, and if you have not promised it to any one, let me finish it."

"I shall not dance any more tonight, but I will be a partner for you. There comes Crystal Gilman, ask her to dance with you. I must run away and see about the rest of the guests."

The waltz came to an end and the laughing couples were again flocking to the conservatory. Captain Daubney joined a group of girls by the fountain, among whom were Violet and Crystal. They were discussing Floy.

"She is positively the most beautiful girl I ever saw," cried Crystal, as she was telling to Captain Daubney about Floy talking to Charlotte Bronte. "She is the very image of Larne's beauty. Would it not be romantic if she should turn out to be the girl we have heard him talk much about? The one who was supposed to be the girl he loved, might be she. I love her already, and we may be neighbors next summer, for Hazelhurst is near Wildwood, our country place."

"You are too fanciful, Crystal," said Larne, "but I like to hear you talk about the girl of my dreams."

They told him all about it from beginning to end. He had no word of Floy to say.

"You are my cousin," said he, "and are present at my last marriage, and want you to know all about it."

"Did you tell her all about it from beginning to end?" asked Larne.

"I did," said Larne, "but I told her nothing."

"Miss Virginia Briscoe returned last Saturday from Bowling Green, where she had been visiting for several weeks the Misses Crum."

Mrs. Philip Graff, Sr., and Mrs. Mauer are visiting in Ohio for several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hon, of near Anchorage, are visiting for several weeks their son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Hon.

The Holloway's maneuvered given a surprise to Miss Bila Cope. The trip was quite an enjoyable event.

The table was beautifully decorated in jack-o'-lanterns and flowers. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Strickland, Mrs. Strickland, Dorothy A. Skiles, Sadie Skiles, Fredericka Fegenbush, Gertrude Hikes, Elizabeth A. Skiles, Mamie Kaiser, Florence Roggenkamp, Cleon A. Summers, Cordelia Fegenbush, Emma Whistler, Ida B. Kallenbach, Freda Houghborth, Vernon Fields, Cordia McFarland, Cleveland Harris, Herman Hayes, Orville J. Stivers, Jerome Hendershot, Hugh Summers, Ertil Mills, John Lanier, Mrs. McLean, George Ede, Whistler and Henry Mitchell. Among the funny and weird costumes were Dutch Girl, Irish Comedians, Indians, Nurse Maids, Chinese, Cow Boys and others.

HARROD'S CREEK, R. F. D. 21.

Oct. 31—Miss Katherine Johnston entertained a number of young lady friends at dinner Saturday.

Misses Nellie Allison, Margarette Smith, Mrs. John Hart, Mrs. John H. Hefren, of Louisville, were guests of Miss Mary Hoke last Sunday.

Mr. Ed. Hunt, who was called her by the death of his brother, Mr. C. E. Hunt, has returned to his home, New York.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ellwanger spent Friday with their daughter, Mrs. Thomas Hoagland, in Louisville.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Hoke and son, Joseph, and Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Markwell dined with Mrs. J. L. Lausen Sunday.

Miss Laura Tyler spent Sunday with her sister, Mrs. Charles Schneidmiller.

Mrs. John Ruhrl spent as her guest Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Wolf and daughter, Miss Katie, and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Cunningham, of Louisville.

Mr. P. A. Hunt and wife, of Crestwood, moved to the home of their mother, Mrs. C. E. Hunt, last week.

"But, will she ever forgive me for letting her remain in ignorance, while I was so much in the dark myself?"

"She must not be told tonight," said Delia. "Let her enjoy a few hours of dancing and happiness. Tomorrow you may call and tell her the truth."

"But, will she ever forgive me for letting her remain in ignorance, while I was so much in the dark myself?"

"She must not be told tonight," said Delia. "I have always believed Larne's attachment, and he would bow his head."

Delia turned to her cousin.

"Leon, I have always believed Larne's attachment, to be a villain, but now I know what a friend he has been to days at Fern Glen seminary. Nina Hazelton was his dearest friend there and he still remembers her fondly. And to think you are her sister. No wonder I love you so well."

"Do not cry, then, for I suppose Nina cares for you too."

"She is—she is—oh Floy! must I tell you? Do you remember your past?"

"Yes; I remember everything. I believe it all came to me in my dreams. I had such a long delicious sleep and my head no longer hurts me. That curious throbbing feeling has left me. I have slept well since you kept me from marrying, Walter Lyon; how I hurt my head and how you and Mrs. McLean nursed me and brought me here with you. It seems but a few days since I left you, but I know it is longer for me. In a flower garden, I have seen many flowers since you left me, and now the snow is upon the ground. I want to go home at once and see papa and mama and all the rest of them. All except Nina; I cannot see her soon, as she has gone to Europe."

"I beg your pardon, but the first ceremony," was all Larne said.

"Mock minister?" inquired he, in a bewildered tone.

"Yes, I know as well as I that the marriage between Walter Lyon and myself was a mere sham, and through your agency. But thank heaven, there was another ceremony, and I am now his lawful wife."

After The Grippe

"I am much pleased, to be able to write and thank you for what Cardui has done for me," writes Mrs. Sarah J. Gilliland, of Siler City, N. C.

"Last February, I had the Grippe, which left me in bad shape. But that has been soothed with female trouble, for ten years, and nothing seemed to cure it."

"At last, I began to take Cardui. I have taken only three bottles, but it has done me more good than all the doctors or than any other medicine I ever took."

"It is the best tonic you can use."

"It builds strength, steadies the nerves, improves the natural glow of health."

Cardui is your best friend, if you bring it with you."

"Of the thousands of ladies whom Cardui has helped, what is the best way to prevent it?"

"Remember, you cannot get the benefit of Cardui in any other medicine, for they are not sold in any drug store except in the Cardui bottle."
